

Notes on the Contributors

Cosmin Sebastian Cercel is Professor of Comparative Legal History at Ghent University and researcher at the George Barițiu History Institute of the Romanian Academy in Cluj-Napoca within the project: „An Ethnography of the ‘dual state’: the state of siege and the ascent of authoritarianism in Romania (1933–1944)”. He holds a doctorate in Comparative Law from the Sorbonne School of Law (2012). His main research explores the nexus between law and authoritarian ideologies with a specific focus on continental legal theory and constitutional history. He is the author of Towards a Jurisprudence of State Communism: Law and the Failure of Revolution (Routledge, 2018).

E-mail: Cosmin.Cercel@ugent.be Iuliana Cindrea-Nagy holds a PhD in the study of religions and is currently researcher at George Barițiu History Institute of the Romanian Academy in Cluj-Napoca. Her main research interests include the history of religious minorities in Romania, such as Old Calendarist, Tudorist, and Neo-protestant communities, the manner in which they were perceived by the totalitarian regimes and their secret police in the 20th century Romania, as well as the repressive mechanisms used towards these communities. She is currently a member of the project „An Ethnography of the ‘dual state’: the state of siege and the ascent of authoritarianism in Romania (1933–1944)”.

E-mail: iuliacindrea@gmail.com

Cristina Diac is an Assistant Professor at the National Institute for the Study of Totalitarianism of the Romanian Academy, and Associated Lecturer with the Faculty of History, University of Bucharest. Research interests: history of the European left, the communist activism in interwar Romania and the communist networks, transnational political movements, political radicalism in the 20th century. Her latest publications in English: „The communist discourse on minorities in interwar Romania and its practical implications for the anti-fascist fighters,” in Anders Ahlbäck, Kasper Braskén (eds.), Anti-Fascism and Ethnic Minorities. History and Memory in Central and Eastern Europe, Routledge, 2023 (forthcoming); (co-author) “Afterlives and memories” in Robert Gildea, Ismee Tames (eds.), Fighters across frontiers. Transnational Resistance in Europe, 1936–48, Manchester University Press, 2020.

E-mail: cristina.diac@gmail.com

Pascal Girard is Associate Research Fellow of the “Centre de Recherche Universitaire Lorrain d’Histoire” (CRULH) at the University of Lorraine (Nancy-Metz, France). He defended his PhD thesis on “Political Conspiracies in France and Italy from the End of the Second World War to the Late 50s” at the European University Institute in Florence (2012). He is specialised in the study of radical politics during the Cold War and particularly investigates the link between conspiracy theories and political violence.

E-mail: pascalgir@gmail.com

Kristina Krake is lecturer at Scandinavian Studies and European Studies at the University of Amsterdam. Her research interests include Scandinavian political history in the 20th century, the fragility and resilience of democracy, and responses of the political system to extreme political movements. She holds a PhD from the University of Southern Denmark (2017); her doctoral dissertation being awarded the Danish Labour History Prize 2018. Her latest publications: Kanslergadedeforliget, Aarhus: Aarhus Universitetsforlag, 2023 (Monograph on a Danish socio-economic key event of 1933); “From revolutionary Paroles to Democratic Rhetoric: Replacement of the Political Vocabulary within the Norwegian Labour Party in the Interwar Period”, Scandinavian Journal of History, 2023, 48 (3): 319–340.

E-mail: k.krake@uva.nl

Rastko Lompar is research assistant at the Institute for Balkan Studies SASA in Belgrade. In 2020, he defended his PhD thesis entitled “Anti-Communism in the Kingdom of Yugoslavia 1934–1941”. His research interests include anti-communism, fascism, history of right-wing movements in Yugoslavia and the relationship between fascism and religion. His latest book is Dimitrije Ljotić: Teacher or Pharisee? (2021, in Serbian).

E-mail: rastko.lompar@bi.sanu.ac.rs

Corneliu Pintilescu is researcher at the George Barițiu History Institute of the Romanian Academy in Cluj-Napoca. His research interests include emergency powers and dictatorial regimes in twentieth century Romania, political opposition and state coercion in the Eastern Bloc. Latest publication in English:

(co-edited with Ottmar Trașcă and Virgiliu Țărău) Building a Nazi Racial Community in the South-East. Mobility and Transnational Transfers between Nazi Germany and the South-Eastern European „Volksdeutsche“, Regensburg: Pustet Verlag, 2023 (forthcoming).

E-mail: corneliu.pintilescu@acad-cj.ro

DTP: Teodor Borșa

www.bontipo.com